

Building a Culture of Health Across the United States

Culture of Health Leaders is a leadership development program co-led by the National Collaborative for Health Equity and CommonHealth ACTION with support from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. It reaches beyond the traditional realm of health and health care to engage people from any field or profession who want to create a healthier society. The new class represents fields as diverse as transportation, education, food systems, and reaches across private, public, and nonprofit sectors. These leaders will collaborate to address persistent problems that have eluded those working within a single sector, seeking solutions that can emerge from the wisdom of their own communities. For more information, visit cultureofhealth-leaders.org or see rwjf.org/changeleaders to learn about the 2016 and 2017 cohorts and find additional leadership opportunities.
